%, root canal treatment in 41%, and root canal treatment + internal bleaching in 17.6% of patients. Overall, color stability was achieved in 70.7% of patients at 12 months. There was a statistically significant difference between the groups ( $p=0.01$ ) after 1 and 3 months of bleaching treatment, but no difference was found at 6, 9, and 12 months. Tooth color showed stability in 77.8% of teeth at 12 months. The color change ( $\Delta E$ ) from the baseline to 12 months was  $5.2 \pm 4.0$ . There was a statistically significant difference between groups ( $p=0.001$ ) at baseline, 1 month, 3 months, and 6 months, and between the two bleaching regimens ( $p=0.001$ ) at all times. This is the first study to evaluate the effect of bleaching materials on the short-term color stability of maxillary central incisors with VAST surgery. One-visit bleaching materials containing 10% carbamide peroxide and 10% arginine and aspartic acid provided clinically stable long-term tooth color in patients with maxillary central incisor malalignment.
